Re: Watson House, Addison

Dear Mr. Cosgrove:

The Vermont Advisory Council on Historic Preservation reviewed your request for nomination of the Watson House, Addison to the National Register of Historic Places at their meeting on April 16, 1986. Thank you for the photographs that you provided. The council determined that the property does appear eligible for inclusion in the National Register.

It is required that the National Register nomination form be prepared by a qualified architectural historian. The form includes an extensive architectural description of the property or properties, a well-researched evaluation of the historic and architectural significance of the building(s), maps and photographs. The volume of nomination requests received by the Division has grown to the point which precludes the nomination being prepared by the Division staff.

Currently, the best way to accomplish a timely nomination of a property to the National Register is for the property owner to employ a freelance architectural historian to prepare the nomination. In the event you wish to choose this approach, we are enclosing a list of architectural historians who have worked in Vermont. The list is not necessarily exhaustive. There may be other professionals with whom we are not acquainted. If you decide to employ an architectural historian, it will be necessary for him or her to contact the Division before beginning work on the nomination.

Upon receipt of the finished nomination, we will review the form for completeness. Federal regulations require that the Division then provide you with written notification that your property is being considered for inclusion in the National Register. This will provide you with the 30-day comment period required by federal regulation in which you may choose to concur in or object to the nomination.

Following the comment period, the nomination will receive final review by the State Advisory Council and will be forwarded to the National Register. Federal review takes up to 45 days and when approved, is followed by official listing on the Register.

When we receive notification that the property has been listed on the Register we will send you a letter informing you of that action.

Thank you for your interest in the National Register program.

Sincerely,

DIVISION FOR HISTORIC PRESERVATION
